

Context of the movie

Django, a slave in 1858, who on being transported through Texas in the bitter winter cold, has a fateful encounter with the extraordinary Dr King Schultz, a mysterious German played by Christoph Waltz. Django's new friend gives him a taste of freedom, but is astonished to learn of his connection with a fellow slave, a beautiful woman named Broomhilda (Kerry Washington); it is a mis-hearing of the name "Brünnhilde" given by her German masters. She is being held at the plantation Candieland in Mississippi, owned by the revolting racist and sadist Calvin Candie, played by Leonardo DiCaprio. Somehow, and with Schultz's help, Django must get her out. His soul will never be unchained until he sets his love free and takes a terrible revenge on her oppressor.

Quiz

What was Dr. Schultz's profession prior to becoming a bounty hunter?
Why do you believe Django and Schultz are alone in the tavern?
Why does Django react in such way after drinking beer?
Have you seen "Django Unchained"?